

BINGO group game

This is a group bingo game, for use in a class or at an End-of-Year Hickey party. It uses words through lesson 11, as an average of how many lessons the learners may have covered during the school year. Not every board has every word, and there are a lot of words, so it takes a while to play.

Preparation:

1. Laminate the bingo boards and cut them out.
2. Cut out the word slips (in the tables without headings at the end of the document) and put them in a bag.
3. Provide each player with a bingo card and an erasable marker.

Play:

1. Have one learner draw the slips from the bag and read the word aloud. (A teacher or reliable learner should write each word on the board for the class to see.) The class should give the definition if possible.
2. Each player checks his or her card and marks the words that have been called.
3. The first player to have three in a row in any direction comes to the front for verification, and wins! Bonus points if the player can state the definitions of the words.

Adapting the game:

Make more boards or change the words (if your learners are up to a different lesson).
